IN mem'ry I see an old homestead rare
That was heaven on earth to me,
It was plain and so humble, yet naught can compare
With that spot where I long to be.

In a little house on a little street,
In a little town near by,
Where the roses climb o'er the garden wall
And you hear the robin's cry
Where peace and rest make life seem blest,
When I'm weary how I sigh
For that little house on a little street
In a little town near by
